The Maine Community Foundation is at an exciting place. We are proud of our 33 years of accomplishments, but we know the foundation’s future success will require more vocal, visible, and catalytic leadership. We also know that any success will require a commitment to think and plan long term and work closely with partners.

Toward that end, MaineCF staff and board revisited our Plan for the Future with the goal of sharpening the foundation’s focus and increasing its impact. This process has been rewarding. We have met with—and listened to—hundreds of people throughout the state to better understand the challenges and opportunities facing Maine people and their communities. We have studied systemic social and economic challenges. We have sought input from experts on pressing issues. We have reviewed innovative national and global philanthropic practices.

Our goal throughout has been to identify ways in which we can maximize our relationships, resources, and reputation to help improve the quality of life for all Maine people. We hope to complete the planning phase of our work by early fall. We will keep you apprised.

On a tour of the Mayo Mill in Dover-Foxcroft this past May, MaineCF board and staff could see firsthand the success that can be achieved when a group of committed partners, including the Maine Community Foundation, believes in a project and is willing to invest in community—and in Maine. This complex of buildings, which was shuttered in 2007, is now a thriving community center with a café, boutique hotel, 22 market-rate apartments, and business offices, including the studio of the photographer who took this picture.

This report to the community represents a slice of the community foundation’s work across Maine. We thank all of our donors and nonprofit partners who have helped us grow and prosper.

MAINE is home to tens of thousands of refugees and immigrants, including Tariq Alziadi and his daughter Sama, 4, who became U.S. citizens during a ceremony this spring at Lyman Moore Middle School in Portland. More than 55 percent of immigrants in Maine become naturalized citizens.

Alziadi’s story mirrors those of many new Maine residents who have fled unstable homelands for a new life in the U.S. He left Iraq in 2010 and now works as a translator. He and his wife, Anwar Albatat, live in Sanford with daughters Sama and Lara, who is 3.

Maine Community Foundation supports immigrants and refugees through a range of competitive and donor-advised grants to nonprofits. Here are just a few organizations committed to helping new citizens:

- Coastal Enterprises, Inc., of Brunswick works with immigrants to create and support new businesses.
- Portland Adult Education’s New Mainers Resource Center helps employers meet the demand for skilled and culturally diverse workers.
- New Mainers Public Health Initiative educates immigrants and refugees in Lewiston/Auburn about preventive health measures.
- Community Financial Literacy in Portland makes sure immigrants and refugees are financially prepared to reach their goals.
- Somali Bantu Community Association of Lewiston/Auburn helps refugees create a new life in Maine by addressing food security, women’s empowerment, youth development, and conflict resolution within families.

In 2014, the Maine Community Foundation received two significant grants from the Next Generation Foundation to support nonprofits and students across the state. Last year, we began to put these resources to work, building the capacity of nonprofit organizations and helping adult learners make the transition to higher education. Additional gifts from the Next Generation Foundation led to the establishment of five agency endowments and seven designated funds at MaineCF.

Adult College Completion Fund

The challenges facing adults returning to college are immense, and they often lack the financial, academic, and cultural support necessary to make the move—and succeed. The Maine Community Foundation manages 20 scholarship funds that offer financial support to adult learners. Some of these funds focus on a particular part of the state; others assist specific programs and schools. Many of them carry the name of a donor especially passionate about helping these students access education: Thomas and Beulah Musgrave, Bettie MacRae, James and Marilyn Rockefeller, Henry L. P. Schmelzer, Hugh and Elizabeth Montgomery.

The community foundation’s commitment to making more and larger scholarships available to adult learners was bolstered by a $2-million endowment gift to MaineCF from the Next Generation Foundation. The Adult College Completion Fund currently supports students at Eastern Maine and Washington County community colleges who are participating in the Summer Success Academy, which provides intensive academic prep for college-level work, advice on financial aid, and assistance with career planning. Working with the Foundation for Maine’s Community Colleges, MaineCF is providing approximately $80,000 in financial aid each year to students at the two campuses.

Building Stronger Nonprofits Fund

“We aim to not only support nonprofits, but make them stronger.” So states the Next Generation Foundation on its website. In line with this mission, the foundation gave a $2.5-million grant to MaineCF, which became the Building Stronger Nonprofits Fund. The goal of this fund is to strengthen the capacity of, and offer technical assistance to, nonprofits.

For the first year of grantmaking, MaineCF directed these funds to nonprofits applying for capacity support through four of its grant programs: Community Building, Equity, People of Color, and the Fund for Maine Land Conservation. A wide range of organizations have received funding, from Our Katahdin and Our Town Belfast to the Telling Room and Tree Street Youth. MaineCF plans to disburse approximately $100,000 annually to support capacity-building efforts.

Encouraging Innovation

Bigelow Laboratory for Ocean Sciences // Impact Investing

Could algae become part of Maine’s growing aquaculture industry? Researchers at Bigelow Laboratory for Ocean Sciences in Boothbay are exploring ways to incorporate algae into products at a new greenhouse funded through MaineCF.

Preserving History

Committee to Restore the Abyssinian // Belvedere Historic Preservation Fund

Grant funding supports restoration of the Abyssinian Meeting House in Portland, Maine’s oldest African-American church. The building is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

MaineCF helps thousands of nonprofits and individuals across Maine. In 2015, the foundation awarded more than $25 million in grants and scholarships from its competitive and donor-advised funds. Grants support a wide range of needs and interests, including childhood education, new residents, health care, the entrepreneurial economy, historic preservation, and the arts.
As the Maine Community Foundation sharpens its programmatic focus, staff and board will look for ways we can provide more support to help meet some of the basic needs of Maine people. Here are a few grants and funds that offer inspiration.

TRINITY JUBILEE CENTER

The Trinity Jubilee Center in Lewiston focuses on food security, public health, community education and support, and youth development. Patrons of the food programs can also receive assistance to write their resumes and find work, make an appointment at the center’s free clinic, and utilize its day shelter. These and other comprehensive services assist more than 1,000 people each week as they navigate challenges in their lives.

WALDO COUNTY WOODSHEDE

With the motto “warm thy neighbor,” the Waldo County Woodshed in Belfast provides firewood for people in need through distribution sites in Searsmont, Waldo, Monroe, Frankfort, Belfast, and Brooks. The Woodshed received a grant from MaineCF’s Maine Charity Foundation Fund in 2015. For the 2016 grant cycle, the fund will focus on programs for children and older adults, especially those that support people who are vulnerable or disadvantaged because they live in poverty and/or lack access to education, housing, food, and transportation. Visit www.mainecf.org for new guidelines.

NEIGHBOR4NEIGHBOR FUND

In 2014 Ed Kaelber, MaineCF’s founding president, established the Neighbor4Neighbor Fund at the community foundation to provide mini-grants to elderly citizens in Hancock County that help cover the cost of various necessities, including winter clothing, wheelchairs, and hearing aids. “My inspiration for this fund comes from my desire to give back to our community,” says Kaelber, “and to encourage others to support seniors in the community who have unmet needs.”

INVESTMENT PERFORMANCE

Effective stewardship of philanthropic assets is the key to building permanent charitable funds to strengthen Maine communities. While the past decade has been especially challenging for investors, the Maine Community Foundation has maintained a secure record of risk-adjusted returns, annualized in the top quartile of more than 450 endowments and foundations as reported by Cambridge Associates.

A DIVERSIFIED PORTFOLIO

The goal of the Maine Community Foundation investment program is to preserve and enhance the real value of assets over time. To help accomplish this goal, the community foundation maintains diversified asset allocations and utilizes more than 30 different investment managers who employ a broad array of strategies and span the globe.

LEAVE A LEGACY

THE SALLY S. TONGREN SCHOLARSHIPS
Sally Stetson Tongren (1926-2014), a Houlton native, bequeathed nearly $4.8 million to the Maine Community Foundation to endow two scholarship funds for students in Aroostook and Washington counties. The funds, which will begin making awards in 2017, will benefit students when they graduate from high school.

Tongren was the daughter of Albert K. and Hazel Hewes Stetson. Her father was the owner and publisher of the Aroostook Pioneer, the first weekly newspaper in The County. She attended Houlton schools, graduated from Oak Grove Academy in Vassalboro, and earned a bachelor’s degree from Wellesley College. She had a keen interest in animals: she was a docent at the National Zoo and published several books about animals. She and her husband, Hale N. Tongren, lived most of their adult lives in Virginia, where he taught at George Mason University for 31 years. They moved to Topsham in 2005.

“We are honored to be able to help fulfill Sally Tongren’s legacy,” said MaineCF CEO and President Steve Rowe. “These scholarships will provide a financial boost to Aroostook and Washington county students as they head for college.”

WAYS TO INVEST IN
